On October 5, 2017, the Flight Crew attended a team-building field trip at Winding Trails in Farmington, CT. We split into groups based on our interests and rotated through a series of activities throughout the day. The activities required us to work together and think of strategies we could use in order to complete them. Each group was challenged to an activity that requires six tires that were multiple sizes and colors. As a group, we had to work together and move the tires to a different peg where they had to be stacked as they were on the first peg. Everyone was involved in the movement of the tires and they were able to share their strategies. In conclusion, the Winding Trails field trip focussed on team-building and brought the Flight Crew together as a community. It was a huge success!
